"We have a story we love to talk about:

there is a young boy on a beach who is throwing starfish into the ocean. An older man approaches the young boy and says, "Boy, what are you doing?" He says, "The tide is low, the sun is high, and if I don't get them all back into the ocean they're going to shrivel up and die."

The man points to the boy and says, "Look down the beach, look down the shoreline. There's millions of them, or thousands of them. There's no way that you can get them all back. Do you think you can really make a difference?"

The young boy thinks for a moment, and then just starts tossing starfish back into the ocean. He turns to the older gentleman and says, "I don't know, but I know I just made a difference for that one."

Utah Attorney General:

Thank you very much ladies and gentleman. Thank you. Thank you. Good morning. It's great to see this many of you out. Thank you, each and every one of you who came out today to support Utah's efforts in the fight against this horrible, evil institution that we call human trafficking. There are over 40 million modern day slaves worldwide, and thousands of them throughout the United States. Many of you have known about this issue, and have been fighting against it and working here for years, some even decades.

This is an institution that's been around since the beginning of time, but it's really only now that the mainstream, the public, is starting to gain awareness. A little over four years ago, a dear friend of mine who was a superstar in the law enforcement community—he was a specialized agent with a very special set of skills—left his law enforcement career and everything that he knew, his pension and his security, to start a nonprofit called Operation Underground Railroad.

They've done jumps everywhere throughout the world. They've rescued kids, and then helped them get to safe places with their aftercare programs. Tim Ballard, are you here? Can you come on up, so we can recognize you and Operation Underground Railroad.

TIM BALLARD

Former Special Agent, Homeland Security / Child Sex Tourism Jump Team:

I'll be very brief. To invoke history, in 1791, the Haitian population rose up and destroyed slavery in their country, which was led by Toussaint Louverture. The abolitionists in America were watching. Fredrick Douglas was watching, and he used that inspiration. When slavery was finally eradicated legally—because it has not been eradicated in actuality—Fredrick Douglas said, "Let us not forget the sons and daughters of Haiti, who are the true pioneer abolitionists of the 19th century."

We'll turn the rest over to God, and pray for us all as we take our flights in the next 24-48 hours, and execute this operation. I am certain we will have success. Thank you so much.

"Let us not forget the sons and daughters of Haiti, who are the true pioneer abolitionists of the 19th century."

SEAN REYES:

Well, ladies and gentleman welcome. We're here to discuss preparations for what we are so excited for. It's a day that we've waited a long time for, and we want to thank my colleague, Attorney General Ocnam [the Haitian Attorney General], who's here with his team. Then, our friends at the DCPG, the judicial police for Haiti.

Our philosophy is, it doesn't matter what country the kids belong to or were born in, they're all our kids and we want to protect all of them. But, sometimes people in our own country ask us, "Why are you going to Haiti? Why does O.U.R., or why would the Attorney General spend time in another country? We need you here."

Our response is, "On global crimes, like human trafficking, we can't pretend that it just happens in the United States. We work on it here domestically, so that we can protect our friends and allies, and also protect ourselves so it never comes into the United States borders."

TIM BALLARD:

The US creates the demand. The highest, the highest producer and consumer of child pornography is right here in the United States. So we know that it's our countrymen that are causing this. Because, we look like those evil countrymen of ours, we can get access quickly to the dark, to the evil. So the police asked,

"Do you have operators who can go undercover, into the belly of the beast, into the darkest places and find these kids?" I said, "Yes, we do."

ADDITIONAL DETAILS:

Ballard, recalling past Operation
 Voo Doo Doll, 2014

TIM BALLARD:

Something happened to me once. This was after I had quit the government, and I was already with Operation Underground Railroad. I was about to go into this compound in Port-au-Prince, Haiti. It was a trafficking center, but it looked like an orphanage from the outside; it had orphanage written on the wall. The police asked us to go in undercover, like we were going to go buy kids.

I remember sitting outside the gate; and I always fight with this. See, the problem with me is, I have seven kids. So, any kid that we're looking to save, the minute I see that kid, I think, "Oh he's six, I've got a six year old. Oh he's 10, I've got a 10 year old." It's so easy for my mind just to, basically, super impose my kid's face, my child's face, on this victim's face. I fight it, and I fight it, and I fight it. That's how I would move on, but those first couple experiences...it just almost destroyed me.

As I was standing outside the orphanage something happened, I looked in and I saw 28 kids, and that was more than I had ever seen. And, it happened again, "Oh my gosh, there's Blain, there's Jimmy, there's Sam...all my kids are here."

I remember being outside that place, and I thought I'm not going [to be able] to do it. I'm going to [have to] embrace this. I've got to buy a kid. These people think we're here to buy kids, and they made it very clear within the first five minutes. They said, "You know we don't adopt kids, right? You know we sell kids?"

I'm like, "Oh of course. Yeah, that's why we're here."

I see this little boy walk around from this dark out building. He walks into the yard of this, this dirty place. It's stinky. It smells like urine, and feces, and it was just horrible. I went up to this kid, and I picked him up. He was my kid. You know, I saw my kid, and he became my kid. So I'm holding him, and my partner is negotiating with the bad guys about the price.

They're saying, "Oh, I think you guys want that one. Okay."

These horrible people are telling us tips on how to evade the police, how they've done this before, and how to get them out of the country.

So, I pick the kid up and I want to go into the dark, kind of out buildings that are around this compound, but I don't want to look like I'm being overly curious. I have kids, so I know how to communicate with kids. I get [the child] to point in the room, as if he's going to show me something. I look over at the bad guys, and I can tell they're like, "Oh, he wants to show that guy whatever." So, it worked.

I got in there, and it just got stinkier and darker. I walk into the belly of this dark building; it got quieter and quieter as I got further away from the sounds of the street and the other kids playing outside. The quieter it got, the better I was able to hear what was always there, right behind me. It was the footsteps of this little child who was following me. I flip around and there's this little girl, and she's looking at me. I don't want to cause more tension, so I give her a candy bar.

Now again, these kids are starving. She takes that candy bar, and she looks at me, and then she looks right back at the little boy in my arms. Without taking her eyes off him, she breaks it in half, like muscle memory, and gives it to him. I'm just thinking, "This is not normal." Then it hit me, "Oh my gosh, they're brother and sister." She's horrified, because how many Westerners have been here and picked up a child, and that child disappeared and was never seen again?

"This is all she has.
The only adults in her life were trying to sell

TIM BALLARD:

And this is why. They're sex addicts. Their minds are twisted and sick to want this. I've interrogated dozens and dozens and dozens of these guys over the last 16 years that I've been working in this field.

No one wants to accept what it is. They don't want to believe it.

How did you get here? Why do you want this? Why do you want kids? And they all have the same story... "I picked up a Playboy Magazine when I was 12 years old, and then I got into more hardcore, and then more hardcore. Then the Internet came along in my 30s. Oh my gosh, I could, with a click of the mouse, I could see anything I wanted. Then the stuff that I had enjoyed since I was a teenager started to wear off. I wasn't getting the fix; I wasn't getting the feeling that I used to get when I was just watching an adult man and an adult woman have sex. Barely legal."

That's when they start searching into the queue, to the Google stream. Well that's not doing it for them anymore.

[They say,] "Okay 16, I'm going to stop there. I'm going to stop at 16, see what happens."

All of a sudden they're at 10, they're at nine, they're at eight, they're at seven. Do you think you can find this stuff online? Absolutely, and that's what's creating this demand. That's why Johns get on an airplane and fly to Haiti, Columbia, and Thailand, because pretty soon the child porn isn't doing it for them, and they need the child. This is why there's two million children forced into the commercial sex trade today.

People weren't talking human trafficking like they are now, and really it's because of the work and efforts by organizations like Operation Underground Railroad. He will never talk about himself, but Tim is a well respected author, lecturer, professor, and he could have a quiet life doing that. Kind of like Indiana Jones, he has another side to him and that's his law enforcement career.

He was a respected law enforcement agent for many years. Because his heart is so big, and he's so compassionate and wants to protect every child, man, and woman that he possibly can in the world, he left the comfort of his badge, his pension, and his way of life in law enforcement several years ago to step out with a lot of faith and create Operation Underground Railroad. At the time he and Katherine (Tim's wife) did it, they had no promise that anybody was going to care.

TIM BALLARD:

I grew up in Southern California. I always knew that I wanted to be a federal agent. I just wanted to do that. I don't know why, it was just inherent. My family wasn't excited about it. My parents thought it was crazy. No one in our family had been military, even generations back, or law enforcement. But it was something that I just wanted to do. So I pursued it in everything I studied. I studied political science and I studied international relations.

My first job after graduate school was at the CIA. I worked in the operations center. My study had been around terrorism and weapons. I graduated from graduate school in December of 2001. So the government was wide open for terrorist experts, and that's what I wanted to do.

As I was learning about what happened at 9/11, I learned that one of the terrorists had come from Mexicali, Mexico and came through the port of entry into California. From there [he went] back east, and then helped launch those attacks. I wanted to get on a border. I spoke Spanish, I thought I wanted to help investigate and defend against terrorist, potential terrorists that would hurt our country. I got the office in Calexico, California. I had my dream job. I mean, I was sitting on the border. My office was on the border. I could see the Mexican flag waving outside my window.

This was the time when we were finding a bunch of tunnels through San Diego, and all the way through the border on California. I was crawling through tunnels, and we were...It was great, but it only lasted for about six months. I was called in by my boss, and he told me that we were starting a new anti-child trafficking group.

I remember a sleepless night, that night, and then getting up the next morning and kind of looking myself in the mirror, practicing my rejection talk. As I was preparing my speech, my wife came up to me emotional with tears in her eyes. She said, "We're making a huge mistake." She said, "The very reason I thought we couldn't do this, or shouldn't do this, is the reason we need to do this, because we have kids. Because we know what childhood is supposed to be. And if it's true that there are millions of kids that are forced into that hell, how do we say no? Because we're afraid of our own pain, which is nothing relative to that pain?"

TIM BALLARD:

So I reluctantly went and changed my speech, it was just one word, "Yes," and we got into it. Then something happened that was completely transformative for me. SCENE:

News Story Clips

NEWSCASTER:

Not long ago, a horrific video of a five-year-old boy being sexually abused in the worst way was discovered by the US authorities. The boy and his 12 year old sister, they had been kidnapped, and they had been trafficked back and forth between the US and Mexico.

GLENN BECK:

Both were sex slaves to a monster of a man. Well something happened. Divine providence stepped in. It took place at the US/Mexico border. The boy was seen by a US official who knew who he was and identified [him as] the boy in the video.

SCENE/LOCATION:

Interview with Tim Ballard, continues

TIM BALLARD:

It was the first time that I was actually seeing one of the kids from the videos. It was an American man who lived in the LA area. He had a big warehouse and inside his warehouse was a house, like a residential home. Inside that home there were cameras, hidden cameras everywhere, porn everywhere, toys everywhere. He'd bring these kids in to desensitize them, and he'd make child rape videos.

As the dust settled in the investigation this kid ran to me. I remember, he jumped into my arms and just held me, and he was shaking. He just said to me with tears in his eyes, holding me and shaking, he said, "I don't belong here." I came home and I walked through the door, and I saw my kids running around playing. I couldn't handle the dichotomy.

My brain couldn't handle it, and I shut down. I mean, this is embarrassing, but this is what happened:

I remember my knees gave out as I sat there. The room was spinning and I collapsed. I fell down on the floor, and my wife thought I was having a heart attack or something. She ran over to me, and just wrapped her arms around me, and just held me.

SCENE/LOCATION:

JONATHAN LINES:

I had a knock on my door one day. Of course, I usually keep my door open, but I think I was on a phone call so I didn't answer the door immediately. But, I went to the door, and I saw Tim leaving. I said, "Hey Tim, I'm done. Come on in."

He was very, very concerned. I could tell he was perplexed. I could tell he was emotionally drained. I could tell that needed someone to talk to. He said, "Listen, I really feel like I could do better, leaving the government."

TIM BALLARD:

Before this law [the Adam Walsh PROTECT Act] was passed, it was passed in 2006, in order to prosecute an American who was sexually abusing children in other countries, on the US side, you had to prove that that person had intent to rape that child while standing on US soil. So, you can imagine how many prosecutions we had prior to this law; like zero.

SCENE/LOCATION: Tim Ballard at a Congressional Meeting

TIM BALLARD:

Unless I could tie a US traveler to the case, I would not be able to rescue the children, even the ones that we were able to identify as being victims. It's outside of the jurisdiction, and I understood that, however that doesn't mean that we couldn't be doing more.

SCENE/LOCATION: The Honorable Orrin G. Hatch's Office

THE HONORABLE ORRIN G. HATCH:

In 1862, his son died and he got extremely empathetic and he started even turning to God and praying like he never had before. Historians have called it a "Damascus Road" experience for him. Then he just said come hell or high water, I'm doing this. No one in his cabinet really wanted him to, and he said I'm doing it.

He changed the course of the war, and he changed the course of history. By making the war about human freedom, liberating the captive, and then the whole thing changed, which lead to the 13th amendment and so forth.

This is what we all need to do: Stop putting the walls up. These are real kids and they don't have anybody, and if we don't open up, no one's going to open up. But, when you do open up, it hurts a little bit. Then you become so much more effective in what you're trying to do. Ideas and inspiration, I'd argue even miracles, start happening when you do that."

News Report Clip, 2015

NEWS REPORTER KATHRYN MAY:

Operation Underground Railroad is a fairly new organization, just over two years old, but it's captured a lot of media attention with its missions to rescue child slaves throughout the world.

India. Haiti. Mexico. They go into the darkest corners of the world and work with law enforcement to rescue children from slavery. Since its inception a little over two years ago, they've helped authorities arrest over 157 people in 12 different countries.

SCENE/LOCATION:

Operation Toussaint Briefing

TIM BALLARD:

I never dreamed that I would work in Haiti. I didn't know anything, really, about Haiti. Until I learned about a little boy who was born in Utah, a US citizen, who was kidnapped in Haiti from his church where his father was the pastor. That little boy was taken and he was kidnapped.

I read about it in the local newspaper and I just had to do something about it. I thought that I could make it into a US case, and I couldn't because it wasn't; it was a Haitian case. The man, the father of this boy, who I met, who changed my world, is Guesno Mardy. Guesno's sitting right here. Guesno, will you just stand up? This is Guesno Mardy and I have so much to say about Guesno.

We went to Haiti to look for his son, but the only way for us to go to Haiti would be to...we had to leave our jobs. I had to leave my job, because I didn't have enough leave from work.

TIM BALLARD:

Three years old. Gardy. His name was Gardy. They kidnapped him from the church where Guesno was the pastor. They took him, this little boy, and they trafficked him. This happens all the time in Haiti.

"I remember reading the story and I...there was a picture of Guesno and my heart just melted. As a father, it just melted for him. I know, I have enough experience to know, very little is being done to find this little boy."

SCENE/LOCATION:

Interview with Guesno Mardy

GUESNO MARDY:

He was three when they took him and now he's 10. When that first happened, I couldn't sleep at night. I couldn't even get into my house and sleep, because as a father, my job is getting my son back. I spent months before I could even get into the house and sleep inside.

One of the suspects, I knew him. Usually, I don't know for everywhere, but in Haiti, people who kidnap others... they don't do that randomly. They know the victims, you know. Even when the legal authorities say there's nothing that they can do about it... One of the times

I talked to them, they asked me to bring them a solid lead. They will come and destroy whatever to get him back to me, but I have to get the lead. I have no means for doing that.

Sometimes when people are on holidays, I took my vehicle and went into the mountains trying to—in a public, open market—trying to see if my boy might come there. It's a very long trip.

I feel that it is my duty. It is my responsibility to get him back. And I will not let go.

CASE NAME Operation Toussaint	OBJECTIVE Operation Underground Railroad and the Fight to End Modern Day Slavery	STATUS Ongoing
--	---	--------------------------

SCENE/LOCATION:

Operation Toussaint Briefing

TIM BALLARD:

We got to Haiti, and we worked with law enforcement and we went in there looking for Gardy. We never found him. What we did find was two things: we found that this child was trafficked through what looked to be an orphanage. It wasn't an orphanage, and we were asked by the Haitian police to go undercover with hidden cameras and go into this place that was selling children. They were selling children for $10,000 and then they raised the price to $15,000.

The traffickers were selling kids and we were able to dismantle that organization and we had to buy two children in the process. We had to buy two children and they were the key to getting the other kids out.

After we got those kids out, and his son was not there, I said Guesno, "I'm so sorry. Your son's not there."

There was 28 children that were rescued, but his son was not there. I started to cry and Guesno was crying, but he only cried for a little bit and then he popped his head up and he said, "Don't you realize what just happened?"

And I said, "What? What just happened?"

He's smiling now, and I don't know why he's smiling—cause he's a very smiley guy, and he has a light about him. I learned what that light was, because he said, "If Gardy had never been kidnapped, then your team never would've come here. These 28 kids would be for sale or be sold."

I said, "Yeah, I guess I never thought of it that way."

Then he said maybe the most profound thing that anyone has ever said to me, he said, "If I have to sacrifice my son so that these 28 kids can be rescued, that's a sacrifice I'm willing to make."

That's when I knew that we would never leave Haiti, because of the spirit of that Haitian man. Who then, by the way, went to the police station the next day and he said, "I will take home any of those children that were rescued in the name of my son. I will take them home."

He took eight of those children home that day, and he is their father today in Haiti. So, you see, we could never leave Haiti after that. We decided we had to do more operations. We had to dig deeper and look for Gardy. Dig deeper.

SCENE/LOCATION:

We'll go into a country and the first question we ask, if the police or that government wants to work with us, is what kind of aftercare capabilities are you aware of? These kids, so many of them, there isn't a home to go home to.

It's not like this happy story all the time, where it's like, "Oh your loving family has been waiting for you in the garden and the trees are there and the beautiful flowers, and just go hug them and all is well."

We didn't know what to do. We had some long talks about it and with Guesno and Demitri and they just said please don't give up. Don't give up. There are good people in this government that want this problem to go away.

And what happened was what we hoped would happen. The good people who didn't know what happened to us, they came to us. The good people came to us and they said, we didn't know this truth. We didn't know what happened, but we will not stand for it.

And I'm looking at the good people right now, who came to us. The job's not quite done, but it's almost done, because now we need to go back and we need to re-arrest every single one of these traffickers.

It will be a message to Haiti, to America, to the whole world that there are good people everywhere that will stand up for this. That there is light in this dark world. There's light. If we don't become that light, there is no light.

ATTORNEY GENERAL OCNAM:

(Speaking through a translator) I was listening to your words. I should be the one to thank you guys, because you choose to come help me and my country. When I became attorney general, I saw that case in my office. I saw that case about the trafficking in Kaliko Beach.

The first part was to fire those judges. And I've done this. Sometimes they try to threaten me over the telephone, but I'm not scared. Because I want to keep going with this cause. Instead of telling me thank you, I will be working together with you to keep working. And we are going to fight.

Jump Team Lead/ Ex-Navy Seal:

We finally have our eyes on what's going on. We're shifting our mindset. There are two of them that we still need to verify, and we're going to have reconnaissance teams running the rest of the day. It limits what we want to do during the day. We would rather not do a snatch and grab on the side of the street in the daytime. It's very hard to sneak up to people the way this traffic is, and do that effectively. It's very low chance; I'm talking like a 15% chance of getting these guys.

Just so everyone knows, Andrew knows this area we're going to better than anyone. He's lived there for periods of his life, so he knows this better...honestly, he knows this better than the police that are putting us in there. He knows this area.

MEDIC:

Okay, this is the part that nobody really wants to talk about or do, but that's the part we probably need to know the best, if somebody gets shot or stabbed or severely injured enough that they have to be taken to a higher level of care. We've got a number of these kits that are going to be spread out in the vehicles. These are what we call blow out kits, so ... Is anybody in here familiar with medicine besides the medic...

[NO ONE RESPONDS]

MEDIC:

Okay, so then none of this stuff is going to matter to you. However, at that time if somebody gets hurt and somebody yells medic, everything else needs to stop. Nothing else matters, because you could lose a person at that point, right? So, the Haitians are going to do whatever they're going to do, but this group in here, we're going to keep that person alive.

DAVE LOPEZ:

Our target's name is Cho. She is a pimp who is going to be on the street corner about two or three blocks from here. We intend to take Cho and try and use her to get information. We've got eight other targets that are out there that were stupidly released. We know that she paid $80,000 to someone to get out of jail. We really want to understand where she got $80,000 from. We believe a criminal organization supports her. We've been to her house. She's not living large at all, so if she's backed by someone, we want to find out, "Who paid you the $80,000, and who within the government did you give that $80,000 to?"

In addition, we want to just scare the living daylights out of her and use the momentum and, kind of, fear. Saying, "Just, listen, the next five minutes of your life are going to determine the next fifty years of your life."

This is our plan. Once the Haitians come, we'll-

Is anybody in here familiar with medicine?

TM BALLARD:

It's their country, of course. So we do what they want.

ANDREW:

Right.

DAVE LOPEZ:

Perimeter 1 and Perimeter 2, as long as we've got eyes looking outboard with guns while we're in the middle, that's the only goal here. We're making these things really simple. Look, we don't all rush to the middle of the action. That's what rookies do, right? That's what idiots do. They have a job, and even if they don't like their job, even if it's not the cool job, this is their damn job.

ANDREW:

I think it goes without saying, we don't want them to know where we're staying tonight at all, and if we need to take different routes... or just be really familiar with who is behind you and who could be following you, even if it's a little motorcycle. Those guys are the worst. Motorcycle guys are bad, and they're going to be informants. We want to sleep safely, and those driving to the airport tomorrow, we don't want any issues.

PÉTION-VILLE POLICE CHIEF:

Hey, guys.

TIM BALLARD:

Are the guys downstairs?

JIM:

We have 17 guys all together from my side.

TIM BALLARD:

Perfect. The Recon-1, we're like three minutes to deploying.

JIM:

Okay, driver's down there. He's waiting.

ANDREW:

All right you guys. Up there, where the lights are, is about where she's at. It's this car pulled over.

TIM BALLARD:

Are we close, man?

ANDREW:

Yeah, it's right here. Ready?

ALL IN CAR:

Un. Deux. Trois! Go! Go! Go! Go! Go!

Go in front and block them.

We'll become that perimeter.

I am a citizen of America.

There are minors on scene and he's got condoms.
We have sex toys. We got condoms in there.

"Cho's" Brothel

During the raid,
this undercover camera caught a pedophile raping a minor.

This is tragic and graphic, and will only be used as evidence to prosecute this case.

DIMITRI: Who did you pay to get out of jail?

CHO: I'm not going to lie.
I don't know these words.

CHO: I'm not going to say.
Im not going to rat on no one!

Tim and the team in route back to the police station after the raid.

ANDREW: Tim, is that a big deal that we got an American?

That lady, she's the one that got arrested already?

-At Kaliko Bay?

SEAN REYES:
Thank you.
You're an inspiration to all of us.

A man in a blue shirt is being embraced by others in a crowd. The scene is dimly lit, with a focus on the man in the blue shirt. Other people are visible in the background, some wearing hats.

SEAN REYES:
This is another example of the bravery and strength of the Haitian people.

A man in a military uniform is speaking to a group of people. He is wearing a dark uniform with a beret. The background shows other people, some in military uniforms, in a dimly lit setting.

ATTORNEY GENERAL OCNAM:
What's important for me is we made this effort and we made this happen.

ATTORNEY GENERAL OCNAM:
With a lot of preparation and work.

A man in a light blue shirt and white jacket is speaking to a group of people. The scene is dimly lit with warm, orange-toned lighting. Other people are visible in the background, some looking towards the speaker.

ATTORNEY GENERAL OCNAM:
And I am prepared to collaborate with you so we can keep up this work...

Interview with Tim, continues

TIM BALLARD:

We get the kids out; four kids are pulled out of these dens of nightmares and they're in our safe house. Jessica Mass, our director of after care is with them, and they start to open up. They start to talk, and the one little girl, the youngest of them, starts to cry. She starts to tear up and she said, "This is the first time that I've ever felt hope, that I can remember."

She preceded to tell us this story about how when she was about six or seven years old, she was kidnapped in the wake of the earthquake. Her parents were killed in the earthquake, like so many parents were, and she was left an orphan instantly. This nice woman comes up, tells her that she'll take care of her, and to come with her.

This was happening all over in the wake of the earthquake. In the case of Rosie, she was six or seven years old. Cho gets ahold of her, promises to take care of her, and instead puts her into a life of sex slavery. This was so crazy, she said, "It's amazing that you guys came and rescued me on January 12. It was January 12, eight years ago, when the earthquake struck."

This little girl was in the most obscure country in the world. Not only that, she was in the most obscure, darkest corner of that most obscure country just wallowing in hell; far from anyone who, possibly, could care.

TIM BALLARD:

It's what we are trying to do. We intentionally go to the darkest corners of the Earth where there is no hope and find these kids. What that does, apart from liberating children, what that does is it provides hope for everybody now.

Where there was no hope, there's hope everywhere. If we can continue to grow our operations and continue to get the support we need, there is hope everywhere for the first time.

---	---	-------------------

SCENE/LOCATION:

Operation Toussaint Briefing

TIM BALLARD:

(Speaking about Operation Voo Doo Doll, 2014) We did find two things. We found them trafficking and selling kids and we were able to dismantle that organization. We had to buy two children in the process. We had to buy two children; and they were the key to getting the other kids out. We've told that story many times, but what's special about those two children is that I've formed a special bond with them.

When we were driving from the orphanage to the sting house in the hotel, this little boy jumped up into my lap, and I'm supposed to be this, you know, hard criminal. After the rescue was done, my wife and I couldn't stop thinking about them, him and his sister, they were the two kids. So we started to work toward adopting them. That was almost four years ago and I just got the email today, the decree came out of Parquet, and their names are now Ballard. They're my children.

If I lived in Haiti, I could take them home right now. All we have to wait for now are passports and visas and then they can come home to Utah.

SCENE/LOCATION:
At Tim Ballard's family home in Utah

TIM BALLARD:
Where's Cole and Coleen going to sleep

DELLA, TIM'S DAUGHTER:
I don't know.

TIM BALLARD:
We have one extra bedroom, right?

DELLA:
Yeah, but where's Daniel going to sleep?

TIM BALLARD:
He's gonna bunk with the boys.

LUKE, TIM'S SON:
He's going to sleep with me.

TIM BALLARD:
With Luke.

LUKE:
Yes!

TIM'S WIFE, KATHERINE:

There are days that Tim and I are like, "What? Why do we have all these kids?" It just...you look at this little guy, and he is so loved, and by just by virtue of the fact that he was born in a family and that automatically gives him access to this love that we don't even have to think about. It's just there.

There are so many children around the world that don't have that, and that could. There just shouldn't be this much excess with that many children in need.

As of 2018, Operation Underground Railroad has rescued 1,000 victims and assisted in the arrests of 443 traffickers around the world.

Gardy Mardy is still missing.

"I'll find him. It is something that I don't have to talk about because I know I will find him. I will find him. One day something will happen. I'll find him."

"Modern day slavery really is the plague of our generation..."

TIM BALLARD

TIM BALLARD left his post as a special agent for the U.S. Department of Homeland Security to form Operation Underground Railroad and go undercover to rescue child sex trafficking victims that he couldn't save when bound by government restrictions. Join Tim and his special forces team as they go undercover in Haiti to bring a ring of sex traffickers, who bribed their way out of jail, to justice.
